BOURBON RYE AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL

Legal or not, the production of whiskey has always been a part of American culture.

Having a long history of distilling spirits, Tennessee's vast land, mineral rich water, and versatile climate makes it a prime region to distill this magical elixer.

Our two resident whiskey specialists: Mandy Shaver & Whitney Cameron have curated a list that showcases not only the region's tastes but also the country's finest hooch.

This list highlights many recognizable names as well as smaller and less known distilleries; we suggest y'all take a sip of something new!

BOTTLED-IN-BOND

In 1897 the United States Government passed the Bottled-In-Bond act which created a set standard of production for distilled spirits. At the time distillers were undercutting whiskey with natural spirits colored with wood chips, iodine, glycerine, formaldehyde and many other substances.

To ensure a spirit was authentic, any product being labeled as “Bottled-In-Bond” must meet the following guidelines:

Be the product of one distillation season by one distiller at one distillery

Aged in a federally bonded warehouse under U.S. Government supervision

Must be aged at least 4 years

Bottled at 100 Proof

The bottle must identify the distillery and place of bottling
